Questions and impulses for reflection on one's own teaching

In three sentences, I describe my ideal image of successful teaching.

Which goals, role models, values and norms guide me in designing my teaching?

How do I take the students into account when designing the lessons?

How do I create a common feedback and discussion culture with students?

How is my teaching coordinated with other subjects?

How do I communicate performance requirements?

How do I support the individuality and autonomy of the students?

Which digital media do I use to support learning between face-to-face and distance teaching?

Which further training was useful recently or could it be useful in the future?

Which overload situations occur and which coping strategies have I already gained experience with?
